The Black Jew Dialogues came to the American Hebrew Academy this past March. The show was funny at times and thought provoking at other moments. The discussion afterwards was a nice debriefing time with availability for everyone to share their thoughts. Having Ron and Larry available to talk with audience members after the show and even the next day was wonderful!

Larry and Ron really listen to feedback when developing the program and preparing to present a show to your community. They are great with kids and adults.

The educational value of this program is multifold. It stimulates conversation with faculty, students, family and community members alike. The Black-Jew Dialogues has educational value that can lead to both informal and formal educational opportunities. It is also a lesson in itself for students and adults to sit with something that might be uncomfortable. Connecting this show with existing educational or multicultural programs in your school or community really compliments this great show!

If you want a thought provoking fun program for your community, this is a good fit!
